

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

National Hammer Throw Champion, Erica Belvit, joins team sponsored by Heaven to the Yeah

June 8, 2022

The Jamaica National Championships this summer will help select the teams for four international senior competitions this summer to include the 1st Caribbean Games U23, the World Athletics Championships, the Commonwealth Games, and the NACAC Senior Championships.

SAN FRANCISCO, CA—Heaven to the Yeah (HTTY) announces a third sponsored athlete, Jamaican hammer thrower Erica Belvit.

Belvit, a recent graduate student from Northeastern University, is a Jamaican national hammer throw champion pursuing this Summer's world championships, and the 2024 Paris Olympic Games. Heaven to the Yeah adds this sponsorship to those of Christian Taylor, two-time Olympic triple jump gold medalist, and Jordan Gray, American women's decathlon record holder.

"I am very grateful to Heaven to the Yeah," Belvit said. "I love the way they highlight the stories of athletes and leaders. Being able to hear the testimonies of different people around the world is so encouraging. I know they have been a blessing to my life, so I am excited to work with them and show more of what Living with Heaven in View means to me as an athlete."

Heaven to the Yeah sponsored athletes share positive stories and testimonials of how faith changes every aspect of life through podcasts, clinics, blogs, and more, in addition to competing under the HTTY brand.

Erica has created a collection of t-shirts, hats, and other swag to show support for her quest to representing Jamaica in her event this summer and beyond. Visit <https://heaventotheyeah.com/erica-belvit/> to shop the collection and support Jamaican Hammer Thrower, Erica Belvit!

HTTY is an online retail start-up with a mission to encourage people to live with heaven in view and spread the hope of heaven globally.
